ACORN Institute

www.acorninstitute.org

The ACORN Institute provides low income communities the means to learn about and tackle a broad array of social issues. It provides education on community organizational models, and promotes neighborhood awareness, legal assistance, and global-local connections. The ACORN Institute bases its work on problems in low income communities that have been identified during the years of community organizing done by the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) and the housing development and counseling work of the ACORN Housing Corporation.

WalMart Alliance for Reform Now

www.warnwalmart.org

WARN, a community alliance, provides the voice for citizens to force Wal-Mart to be accountable to community standards and values. In conjunction with the Wal-Mart Workers Association (WWA), WARN is building a national organization that has the power to affect change in the business practices of Wal-Mart and its affiliated businesses.

ACORN Housing Corporation

www.acornhousing.org

The Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now established the ACORN Housing Corporation (AHC) in 1986 to build and preserve housing assets. Since its inception, AHC has assisted over 45,000 families to become first time homeowners, and has rehabilitated over 850 vacant and abandoned housing units. Virtually all of ACORN Housing's work takes place in areas that have been seriously disinvested and forgotten. AHC works in low and very low-income neighborhoods where over 90% of the residents are African-Americans, Mexican-Americans, and/or recent immigrants from Central America or the West Indies. This includes communities such as Flatbush and East New York in Brooklyn; Englewood and North Lawndale in Chicago; and the communities south of the Salt River in Phoenix.

Living Wage Resource Center

www.livingwagecampaign.org

The ACORN Living Wage Resource Center tracks the living wage movement and provide materials and strategies to living wage organizers nationwide.

ACORN Law on the Web

www.acornlaw.org

ACORN law is legal activity pursued by ACORN and its allies. Its practice is informed by ACORN perspectives on social change in general and legal practice in particular.

The purpose of the ACORN Law Site is to provide interested parties with information concerning ACORN's practice of and approach to legal activity.
